We're Back!

Fillmore Space is back and we're better than ever! You might be wondering, what is Fillmore Space and what is it back from? How is it better? Well, on and off since the 1930s, Fillmore Central School students along with their advisors have published a newspaper for the student body. In the past, it has featured current event issues, Fillmore Central School headlines, highlights on student life, advice columns, pieces of student work, editorials, etc. Unfortunately, Fillmore Space has been out of commission for the last few decades.

That is where we step in, your new Fillmore Space team, keeping a pulse on Fillmore Central and issues that interest and concern you. This is our first publication, so there is going to be a bit of a learning curve until we figure out exactly how we want this to operate, but we are so excited to be able to carry on this tradition. Ultimately, we want this publication to represent all of us and especially you. We are always looking for feedback so be sure to tell us what you think about what you see and what you want to see in future issues. Fillmore Space is yours as much as it is ours! Enjoy!

The Truth of The Matter: Is Fillmore Really Better?

by Anna Schilke

“Simply put, we’re lucky, but luck can mean very little unless you choose to use it.”

Have you ever noticed that when you hear something a lot of times in a row, you tend to drone it out? For me, I stand there, nod a little bit, and pretend I’m listening, when in fact, I’m wondering when that person will stop talking and I can move on with my life. One of those things that people always seem to tell me is how lucky I am to attend Fillmore. If I had a quarter for every time someone told me that I go to a good school, I’d be a rich woman. However, the good thing about hearing something way too many times is that you begin to question at how true it really is. Is Fillmore really better than any other public school? As a student here, I would be the first to admit that I tend to focus on the negative. We have this teacher whom I don’t agree with or that decision by our administration that is not my personal favorite. In spite of this, the negative is marginal compared to the overwhelming good that exists here as well, good which far outweighs the bad.

Fillmore is a small school of about 750 students. We have grades Pre-K-12, and have classes of roughly 50 people. For the size of our school, the opportunities the students get in the areas of academics, extra-curricular activities and college/BOCES options are above what you would expect. Our school caters to students of all types with all sorts of interests. However, this does not even begin to measure the amount of teacher involvement in student life. Our teachers are willing to take time out of their schedules to not only run all these activities, but to do so with an attitude that goes above and beyond what they are expected or paid to do: but the miracles do not stop there.

The greatest difference of all is the student body’s kindness for everyone in the school. As a group, with a few exceptions, we treat each other remarkably well. You only need to look down the upstairs hallway of the D wing at the poster for Sam McCumminsky for proof. Fillmore students care about each other. Why? In a school our size, it is hard not to. Everybody knows everybody else, to the point where you know the names of almost every person you pass in the hall. It’s much harder to disrespect people who you’ve grown up with, because you have a shared history with them. You grew up together, and you also know their parents and siblings too. Despite that, I cannot downplay the students either. As the body of Fillmore, we make the decision to care, something that I have observed isn’t normal. Our Superintendent, Mr. Root, put it this way, “Students treat other students with respect, teachers treat their students with respect, and teachers treat other teachers with respect.” However, the Superintendent is not the only one to comment that Fillmore is a special place. “Fillmore is actually chill” said Julia Ricciardiello, a sophomore that transferred at the start of her fifth grade year. Even the parents agree. “Fillmore is unique” said Karen Hotchkiss, mother of three students.

Simply put, we’re lucky, but luck can mean very little unless you choose to use it. You’re here. You’re lucky. So what are you going to do with that luck?

Little Eagle Awards

Every day during school, Fillmore students are frequently making good choices and doing good deeds. Due to their virtuous behaviors we feel these students should be anonymously recognized each month by presenting them with The Little Eagle Award.

Almost everybody has experienced bullying; whether they were bullied, the bully, or a witness. There are also times when something is considered to be bullying that isn’t. There’s a difference between messing around with friends, having an argument with a friend, bullying, and harassment.

When friends have an argument it isn’t bullying,

“A Little Eagle Told Me . . .”

Bullying

by Maggie Dragow

although it may turn into it. The argument between friends may include teasing, not getting along, or conflict over a desired object, activity, etc. A conflict has no imbalance of power, and is not intended to cause harm.

Bullying is the next step up from just a conflict. Bullying can be physical, verbal, social, or cyber. If there is aggression, intent to cause harm or humiliate, an imbalance of power, or a pattern is formed, then it is considered to be bullying. The imbalance of power may be superiority from physical, popularity, skills, access to something the other doesn’t have, or outnumbering the target.

“In the early hours of the morning, many students come to school hungry and in dire need of food. In one such instance, a sophomore courteously shared his breakfast with another famished sophomore.”

Therefore this month’s Little Eagle Award is granted to that generous student.

Harassment and bullying aren’t the same thing; harassment targets a specific quality about the target. Harassment includes threats, intimidation or abuse based on:

race, weight, ethnicity, religion, disability, sexual orientation, gender, etc. Harassment creates a hostile environment that affects a person’s mental, emotional and/or physical well-being.

If you witness bullying, harassment, or are being bullied, or harassed, the best thing to do is speak up. Tell the bully to stop. It may seem like just saying

Good job Little Eagle!

“stop, you’re being mean” would be ineffective, but it could be enough to get the bully to back off. If you are being bullied, you could walk away to show the bully that they aren’t in control of you. If the bullying or harassment continues, speak to an adult who will be able to help the situation. Everybody can be helpful in a situation like this. Just being kind to the target, letting them know they have somebody to talk to and showing them you care, could make a huge difference. Not saying anything could make the situation worse; the problem most likely will not go away on its own!

Soccer

Varsity Boys

As the Boys Soccer Season comes to an end, all of the team is proud to say that they have only lost once. The boys finished the season with big wins over G-V and Elliccottville to take the number one seat in sectionals. Coach Mullen said, "One of his key players was Jordan Crouch, the goalie, who has never let more than one goal go in, in any game."

Varsity Girls

"Determined and inspiring" is how this Varsity team is described. The girls have a record of five wins this year. With several seniors, the girls are proud to say that they tried their best.

With new goalies Emilee Potter and Mary Chaddock, the girls have definitely improved over these last two months.

JV Boys

These boys have done incredibly well this season. The boys were undefeated until a game a few weeks ago against Genesee Valley. With Mr. Witkowski, coaching from the side line, and Riley Blocho in net, the team is always scoring goals. The boys finished with nine wins, one loss and three ties.

JV Girls

The JV girls are proud to say that they only lost two games. With a first time goalie, Caylen Bedow, and three eighth graders these girls did amazing well.

Modified Boys

For the boys modified team, Jason Miller scored more than ten goals. Mr. Tucker said "The biggest win of the season was against Wellsville, when they won by three points."

Modified Girls

Coached by Cassandra Mills, these girls are described as determined. With a team as big as it's ever been, the girls have won three games this year. Good work Ladies.

Volleyball

Varsity and JV Girls

The team this year is better than it has ever been. With Racheal Cronk and Janae Rangel scoring points in every single game, and the rest of the team right behind them, the girls stop at nothing. After bringing up four girls from modified, the girls should be proud to call themselves a team.

Modified Girls

The girls have had a good season. These girls can always tell you that they are trying their best. The team isn't very big but they make up for it by their competitive and strong spirits.

Tennis

Varsity Girls

With a team of 12, the Varsity girl's tennis always plays strong. With Katelyn Sylor and Sarah Rohe taking singles, and Hannah Hijleh taking doubles, the girls are bound to win. Bridgett Rathbun told us, "Tennis is a competitive game, but we always try our best." Good Work Ladies!

Moral Decline or Nostalgic Banter?

by Nathaniel LaCelle-Peterson

“If the current youth are the same as the past crops, they certainly get more attention for their reprehensible actions.”

I’m sure we’ve all heard someone drone on and on about life in the “Good Old Days.” I’ve heard that back in the day, people were nicer to each other, families were healthier, being promiscuous wasn’t acceptable, the music was better, and God was in the hearts of everyone. In reality, the “Good Old Days” never actually existed.

Every generation likes to tell their kids that the new generation is running towards the devil. Bill O’Reilly says: “Never before in the history of this country have so many corrupting influences descended upon children at one time.” This statement, directed at Marilyn Manson, is ironic and false. Mr. O’Reilly’s generation was told the same thing when they grew up to create the culture of “Sex, Drugs, and Rock N’ Roll.” If every generation is morally decaying, then are we to revert to the 1690s? Is that where we will solve all of our problems and find peace?

There are two key reasons why the obsession with the halcyon past has presented itself now. The first is the depression, both in economics and in popular culture. The airwaves are full of pundits and other voices clamoring of the coming economic apocalypse, or the sins of the other party or “those kids these days.”

When people feel disconnected from culture, especially a fast moving one, they often feel nostalgic about when they were keeping up with pop culture. It’s easy to blame all social problems, then, on the people you may not care about because you fail to understand them. Back in the day, there weren’t LGBT activists or seatbelt laws, so all current problems must be because of the gays or the “gubnment.”

The other cause of ‘mass nostalgia,’ if you will, is the 24 hour news cycle. If the current youth are the same as the past crops, they certainly get more attention for their reprehensible actions. People want to see morally repulsive, violent, content in the media; selling a story of a murder or drug ring is much easier than that of responsible, socially active, “good” youth. If you were to watch television to see what youth were up to across the nation, you’d quickly find that we are the most despicable people who lived. I don’t think that youth are always great people, however I do think that they are at least as bad as past generations, who were able to commit all the same sins without the omniscient scrutiny of the media.

I’m not an apologist for reputable behavior; making decisions that hurt yourself and others is not a way to live life. On the other hand, decrying the current state of affairs and trying to fly back to prehistory when everything was better isn’t logical. There were never the “Good Old Days;” people have been slimy and imperfect all along. The best we can do is accept this and move forward.

Life Without Music Would Be?

by Tristan Blanco

“You just might find yourself listening to the song that could change you as a person or meet the one and only love of your life.”

Music I would say is the harmonic sustenance for the soul, binding us, creating deep thought and perhaps manifesting itself in daily life. There are many genres of music so it's not a one dimensional hobby, or even an aspect. It has many sides many personalities so it befriends almost everyone. It can comfort ones sadness, or even amplify another's feeling of content. I know it sounds pretty deep but music is awesome. It suits everyone's needs. It's a window of opportunity for a career; it's also a window for discovery.

I for one will vouch for music and say that it has helped me through many hard times as I am also quite positive it has helped you. Whether you've had a rough day at school, or just having an angry moody day, hey, whatever the case music has been there for you right? It can be a best friend through all the trials and tribulations of adolescent experience.

Music can also create friends! For instance, if you see a certain man or woman wearing a t-shirt or any article of clothing containing the title of your favorite band name you immediately gravitate towards them. And you might also find some really cool attributes about said person and build an entire friendship just because they had that one bracelet, or that one really cool t-shirt. And even if you aren't the one who typically likes music or isn't the real music fanatic like I am! Well you just might find yourself listening to the song that could change you as a person or find yourself meeting the one and only love of your life. Oh and I had to add a very emotional and mushy ending to appeal to all. Just like music! Wow irony is beautiful isn't it? But hurry! You might discover something amazing through music right now! You might be the first to discover a whole new variation of music! Crazy I know, but it's possible and you can do it. So have fun becoming involved in music and discover things you never knew were possible with it.

Sleeping Freshmen

Never Lie

by David Lubar

Scott's life has become a train wreck ever since he entered high school. His friends slowly start drifting away, money extorting seniors never go away, and the girls he's known for years have suddenly become beautiful... and impossible to talk to. His life at home has been less than great, his jobless older brother has moved in, he has insane amounts of homework, and he just can't get any sleep! Perfect timing for his mother to announce that she's pregnant.

Sleeping Freshmen Never Lie combines Scott's first person view of his school life and his helpful (although somewhat insulting) high school survival guide for his future brother/sister (I'm not telling which). The journal entries usually include some interesting facts or funny tidbits learned I

Scott's classes, for example: Tom Swifties are a recurring joke throughout the book. An example of a Tom Swifty is something like, "I'd like a hot dog", Tom said frankly." See if you can figure out the joke behind Tom Swifties. Again, I'm not telling, so if you want to know the secret, read the book. Wikipedia does not count, just so you know.

Will's Rating: PG for infrequent swearing and minor violence.

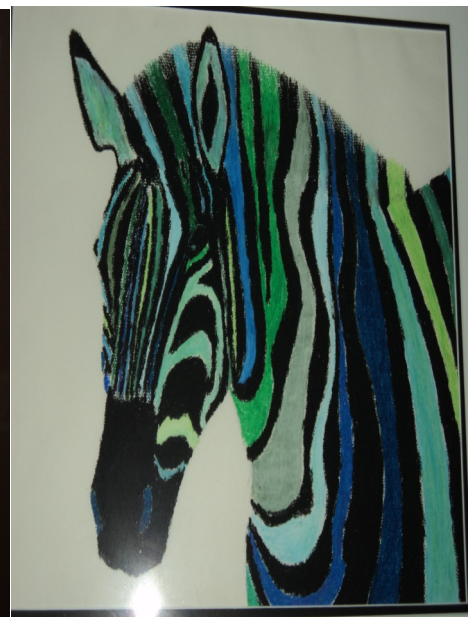

If you already read this book, then definitely read Hidden Talents and its sequel, True Talents, also by David Lubar. Or, if you read those two books, then by all means, read Sleeping Freshmen Never Lie! (If you already read all three of those, then try some of the Weenie books, short story collections that be scary, funny, or just plain WEIRD.)

One more thing before I go: if you have a book that you'd like to see me review, tell me about it and I'll read it. I'm always on the lookout for new books to review, so I strongly suggest that you tell me if you have something interesting. I am legally obliged to read whatever you shove at me, but I'm sure nobody will take advantage of that.

Until next time, live, love, laugh, and read LOTS of books (because books are fun).

Department vs. Department Trivia Challenge

Which department is the most intelligent? It's teacher vs. teacher to prove who is at the top!

In a match between Mrs. Heaney from the Math Department and Mrs. Ellsworth from the Technology Department, Mrs. Heaney came out on top, moving the Math Department ahead in their pool while Tech teachers take second place! Let's take a look at the questions:

#1. What modern day soft drink was created by a pharmacist in his back yard?

Mrs. Ellsworth and Mrs. Heaney both correctly answered Coca-Cola.

#2. What is the royal game?

Mrs. Ellsworth answered Rugby and Mrs. Heaney answered Polo. Both were incorrect. The correct answer is Chess.

#3 What ocean was Amelia Earhart flying over when she disappeared?

Both teachers answered Atlantic incorrectly. The correct answer was Pacific.

#4 How many tines are on a standard dinner fork?

Both teachers answered five incorrectly. The correct answer is four.

#5 What invention bears the US patent number 174,465?

Mrs. Heaney answered correctly with telephone. Mrs. Ellsworth answered Apple computer, which is incorrect.

Dear Miss Space,

I know a girl who is acting like a fool. She lets her "boyfriend" treat her like dirt. He pushes her around. Then she brags about the last time he mistreated her, or about the threats he made to her. Look, how can I open her eyes?

Worried

Dear Worried

My, aren't we interested. . . What's it to you? He's not your boyfriend; he's hers and I'd say that as long as he is her boyfriend, you can listen to her. Why not try to hide your "jealousy" and be friendlier to her. . . Maybe she'll introduce you to the cad.

Dear Miss Space,

How do you tell your boyfriend that you can't stand his cologne?

I CAN'T STAND YOUR COLOGNE.

Dear Miss Space,

What can I do about this coming occurrence of mowing the lawn?

BUY A GOAT

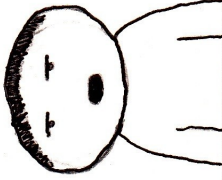

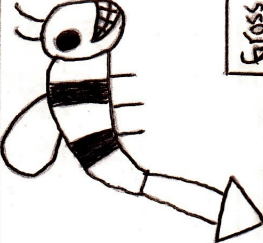

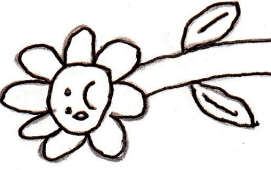

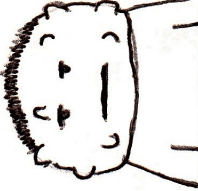

Dear Miss Space,

My brother is a problem. I will be studying and he brings out his horn and starts to practice. He can't wait until after I have finished studying, or practice before I start studying—but rather, he has to start just when I try to study. What makes it worse is that he is a beginner and half the notes he plays aren't written in the book. All together, he sounds like some beast; as a result, I can't concentrate. What can I do?

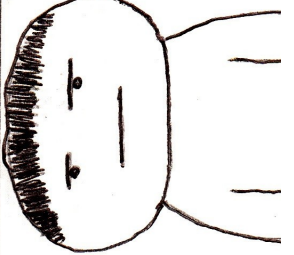

Sincerely Irritated

Dear Irritated,

Unless you live in a one room log cabin, there must be another room with a door which opens and shuts...go in and close it.

Political Viewpoints of the 2012 Candidates

by Anna Schilke

In the 2012 presidential election, two people face off for the chance at the most powerful position in the United States government: the president. On one hand, we have current president Barack Obama, on the other, former governor of Massachusetts, Mitt Romney. Each stands for different things on many subjects, and has a different ideal of what this country need.

In taxes, Romney would like to give relief to the middle class and the rich, whereas Obama wants to set equal taxes by income level. As far as the debt is concerned, they agree that it is a problem, however Obama says that he cut a number of government programs and constituted a four trillion dollar cut. He has also stated that his plans will continue to cut debt. Romney says that we need to send more national programs to the state and also to cut government in general. Mr. Romney also argues that the national debt has doubled under Obama

In the area of benefits, both parties agree that Medicare shouldn't be changed in big ways, although, Romney wants to reform it so that it will still be there for the younger generation. Obviously, Obama stands by his Obamacare, while Romney wants to completely redo it. Romney also supports guns; Obama has made no moves in this area while he was president and has not declared specific plans if he is re-elected. Romney has no time for illegal immigrants, Obama wants to grant them citizenship. Both want to stop Iran, but Romney has less reservation about using more military. The list continues on and on. Obama wants to cut arms, Romney wishes to increase them. Finally, Obama supports green energy much more than Romney does.

Each man agrees that there are problems in our country. How they go about solving them will make the biggest difference in why you should chose to vote for them.

What is Retro Game Cloud?

Retro Game Cloud is the newest site to receive reviews on video games all the way from the Atari 2600 to the Xbox360. The site includes a collection of videos that include reviews, walkthroughs, and How-to's from the minds of the creative duo; Adam Smith (The Retrobit Critic, RGC Workshop, and Question of the Day) and Michael Cole (Proplayer's Game Reviews). In the fall of 2011, the two decided to team up to deliver their creative content to the world via the internet, but it wasn't until the spring of 2012 that they decided on the name Retro Game Cloud. Going under the titles: The Retrobit Critic (Adam Smith) and Proplayer (Michael Cole), the two decided to share their game reviews with the world. "I was very inspired by other video game reviewers such as Pat the NES Punk and Classic Game Room to create my own review series", says Adam. "I decided to create a site where I could share my reviews with the world. I knew full well I couldn't cover every video game ever made, I decided to split the work with Michael Cole having him review the modern half of video games while I covered the older games."

Over the course of little over half a year, Retro Game Cloud has risen up to become a place not only for Gamers to receive reviews but for the two to promote their creative content to the world. The two are already in the Second Season of their series and plan to review games until there are no games in the world left to review.

Retro Game Cloud has associated itself with Joystics Infectious Gaming©, a place for Video Game Critics to share their view on video games. Joystics Infectious Gaming© can be found on the web at <http://www.Joystics.com>.

Shows

The Retrobit Critic

A series of short, comical game reviews for those who like to remember the nostalgia of retro gaming. Creative producer Adam Smith, founder of Retro Game Cloud, Presents his series of short reviews from the Atari 2600 and beyond. His series is designed not only for those who grew up with the consoles such as the Atari 2600, the NES, and the Nintendo 64, but for those who like to look back and see what gaming was like back in the 80's and 90's. His series is currently in the second season and has many future plans for the series.

Proplayer's Game Reviews

Proplayer's Game Reviews is a series created by co-founder of Retro Game Cloud, Michael Cole. Proplayer's Game Reviews was created to target the newer audience of video gamers. Throughout the series Mike gives his view on Video Games from the Nintendo 64 to the Xbox360. Featuring non-scripted walkthrough of games, Proplayer shares his game-play videos and reviews. His series is currently in the second season and has many new and exciting plans for the future.

RGC Workshop

Short for Retro Game Cloud Workshop, the series is the Place to go for the How-to's of Retro-Gaming. Some of the series includes: How to Clean an NES Game, How to Fix a Game Controller, and How to Refurbish a Sega Master System Console. The series is run by Adam Smith and is currently being experimented for new ideas to add to the series.

Question of the Day

As the newest experimental series designed to ask gamers those questions they've been waiting to receive answers for, Question of the Day ponders the topics of Gaming with such as "should there be a Legend of Zelda Movie" and others. The series has received excellent feedback and responses from all sorts of gamers and non-gamers alike. The series is currently run by Adam Smith.

Retro Game Cloud Championships

Created by both Mike and Adam, The Retro Game Cloud Championships are a series of short films where the two have a competition to see who is the champion of Season One, Two, etc. Recently they have released the first installment of the series and plan to create the Season 2 Championships in May of 2013.

A Blast From Space Past

An interesting debate taken from the October 31, 1969 issue of Fillmore Space:

Slacks Debate Rages On—by Slice

This roving reporter asked for opinions on the wearing of slacks by girls during regular session.

Mrs. M. Clark (guidance office):

“Slacks are great for casual wear, but I wouldn’t wear them to work—and being a student is a part-time profession.”

Mr. McGlynn (grade 6):

“I have no objections at all. I’d rather see a well-groomed girl in slacks than a sloppily dressed girl in a dress or skirt.”

Mr. Raykovitch (driver education):

“Only for driver ed. I recall a certain female who almost ran into a tree because she was tugging at her skirt. This might have been prevented had she worn slacks.”

Sara Folger:

“I think it’s all sort of hip; and besides, there’s someone who should look at himself before calling a student’s clothes creepy.”

Mr. Cunningham:

“I’ve noticed that girls who wear slacks in school don’t seem to perform as well in class as they do when they wear dresses.”

Mrs. Shannon (grade 3):

“Maybe I’m old-fashioned, but I still think that the dress for the classroom should be a bit more formal. The wearing of slacks seems to reflect the attitude of the student to her work.”

Mrs. Griffin (school nurse):

“I think slacks are inappropriate for school wear. They are too casual. Also, I believe a well dressed student body creates a better impression.”

Mike Peirsol:

“I don’t think it is any of my business. Girls can wear anything they want as far as I’m concerned.”

Mr. Ken Rice:

“Personally, I’d rather see a girl in a nice dress than in slacks. If it were extremely cold weather, then slacks would be alright.”

Rachel Smith:

“Slacks don’t appeal to me. On some people they are all right. On others—forget it!”
